Chapter 1 by Meg

I glanced back at the damp, reflective street behind me, my hair still dripping wet. I sighed in relief and turned around, face to face with them. I held my breath. They smile menacingly and I gulped slowly.

"Good evening..." I croaked.

"Good evening," They hissed as they slowly moved around me, keeping their eyes on me as if I was their prey, "A good one indeed..."

"So...c-crazy rainstorm right?" I asked, trying to throw them off. They snarled.

"Don't change the topic." They growled, their hair, a mix of blonde and brown, lightly flicking in the wind as they spoke.

"What topic..." I asked innocently.

"Give it to me." They demanded.
